

A chapter finished, a page turned, the sunrise will come back...

Poetry by Ken Maxon

About “A Chapter Finished, A Page Turned, The Sunset Will Come Back”

Were you ever to willingly place your heart in my hand, I would never knowingly let any harm come to it. If you were ever to willingly place your heart in my hand, I could die peacefully knowing I earned that much love from you. If we grew old together, if you were to take your last breath before me, I would take mine as well. Partly because of heartbreak knowing you would never return, partly because my purpose here would be fulfilled and partly because you might need me on the other side and I would want to be there for you if you did.
